

Kay A. Augustine, Ed.D.

Kay A. Augustine, Ed.D., is an active and passionate advocate for authentic student voice in K-12 education. Dr. Augustine is an education program consultant at the IA Department of Education, working to develop a strong foundation for a multitiered system of learning supports that includes social, emotional, and behavioral health supports to positively impact: inclusive classroom practices, school climate, authentic engagement of student voice, and student achievement for school and life.

Her expertise and experience include consulting and training educators and youth to implement instructional practices and methodologies focused on comprehensive social, emotional, academic learning, and character development initiatives across the U.S. and internationally. As a volunteer, Dr. Augustine coordinates the annual International Summit on Student Voice. She has held teaching positions from preschool through junior college, as well as directing district level out-of-school programming in credit recovery and youth enrichment. Kay holds a Doctorate in Education Leadership from Drake University where she also holds a Bachelor of Music Education, a Master of Science in Education in special education, and a Specialist in Education Leadership.
